FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

WOMEN'S FICTION WRITERS ASSOCIATION PODCAST NOW EVERYWHERE PODCASTS ARE FOUND

FEBRUARY 24, 2021, Washington DC: The Women's Fiction Writers Association (WFWA) is excited to announce the Hear Us Roar Podcast, hosted by Maggie Smith, is now available to the public on iTunes, Apple, Google, Spotify, Amazon Music, Stitcher and iHeartRadio.

The podcast shines a spotlight on individual authors, providing additional exposure for their debut, and showcases WFWA as a growing, vibrant association of women's fiction writers.

Hear Us Roar first aired May 26, 2018 and was born from WFWA member Maggie Smith's idea to interview debut women's fiction writers excited to share information about their novel and tips on what they learned on their journey to publication.

Interviewees have ranged from authors with Big Four publishers and their imprints to those with small or university presses, hybrid publishers, and several who have gone the self-publishing route. Guests are primarily US-based but Maggie has had writers from Canada, Australia, and as far away as Indonesia.

"It's a joy speaking with these people. Many of our early guests have gone on to write best-selling second and third books," said Smith. "It's entertaining, and we have an increasing number of Hear Us Roar fans who listen avidly to every episode."

To be considered, a writer must be a WFWA member with a published a women's fiction novel; please visit the submissions page for more info.
